Walt Whitman, born in New York in 1819, was one of America's unusual literacy figures. As an individualist, he rambled through the country seeing people and places, and making them his own. His experiences in earning a living were varied; at time he was a printer, a teacher, a carpenter, a nurse and a newspaper editor. He was a big- hearted man, open and accepting. He gave freely his time to care for the wounded during the Civil War. Though he lived in the city, he often spent his time in the countryside, developing his strong sense of nature, which was carried through his poems. In 1835 he collected verses he had written, and published them in one volume, "Leaves of Grass", a book which he revised and rewrote all the rest of his life. The book was commented badly by some poets and generally ignored by others, probably because his verse forms were not traditional. He had felt that it was necessary to achieve a new poetic form in order to communicate his views. His reputation didn't grow until after his death, and it reached a high point in the 1920s. Another danger to giant pandas is their limited choice of food - they only eat bamboo leaves.

The panda occurs only in China where it now lives in temperate mountain forests between 2,200 m and 3,400 m. Its range is reduced to half a dozen separate mountain ranges in western China on the eastern edge of the Tibetan plateau.

Giant pandas live in bamboo thickets in forests on the steep slopes of mountains, so counting them is difficult. Surveys carried out in the 1970s and 1980s indicated that there were about 1,000 left in the wild although it is now believed that actual numbers are higher than this.
